DUBLIN CASTLE,

19th February,

SIR,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter of the ultimo, forwarding, for submission to His Excellency the Lord Lieut.
a Special Report on Surnames in Ireland.

I am,

Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

(Signed),

D. HAR

The Registrar-General,

Charlemont House,

Rutland-square.

General Register Office,

Charlemont House, Dublin,

January, 1894.

In submitting the accompanying Report on Surnames in Ireland, I desire to express my acknowledgments to Mr. William A. Squires, Superintendent of Records in the County of Dublin, who has most cordially assisted me, and whose long experience in dealing with such matters has been of the greatest advantage ; also to Mr. Peter J. O'Neill, Superintendent of Statistics, for his assistance in the revision of the work ; and to Dr. Robert M. M. M., Inspector of Registration, for furnishing me with notes as to the present state of several Colonies in this Country.

Most thanks are due to the Right Hon. the Earl of Courtown for information and valuable suggestions especially with reference to the names in the County of Dublin, and for very kindly placing at my disposal a MS. on the subject in his private possession ; also to Dr. J. J. Digges La Touche, Deputy Keeper of the Public Records in Ireland, and other friends who have assisted me in various ways.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

ROBERT E. MATHESON.

W. GRIMSHAW, Esq., M.D.,

Registrar-General.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

Investigation into the personal names of the people of any country is a subject surrounded with great interest. By means of family nomenclature much light can be thrown on the customs and habits of a people, as well as the sources from which they have sprung. The history of our country lies enshrined in its Surnames; and on our shop fronts and shop yards may be found side by side the names of the descendants of the Milesian Prince, of the Saxon Viking, and of the Norman Knight.

As early as 1851 the Census Commissioners for that year attempted to arrange the Surnames of Ireland in such a way as to show their distribution. The effort, however, proved unsuccessful, owing to the difficulties met with, and when the names were partially extracted the task was abandoned.

At the termination of the Census of 1881, the late Dr. Lyons, then M.P. for Dublin, pressed the Government to institute an inquiry into names, such as had been attempted in 1851, and his request was very favourably entertained, but as the work of the Census Department was then very much increased, the Commissioners were unable to comply with his request.

I have observed that as a preliminary to any successful effort to tabulate the Surnames in the forthcoming codification of the variations in form and spelling was necessary. With this and other views in mind, from the materials collected during many years in the General Register Office, and from special reports obtained from local officers in the Registration Service, I prepared in 1884 a report entitled "Varieties and Synonymes of Surnames and Christian Names in Ireland," which was issued by the Registrar-General for use in connection with searches in his Office, and which was sent to the Superintendent Registrars and Registrars throughout the country.

The report sets forth the principal orthographical changes in Surnames, exhibiting the varieties in the use of prefixes and affixes; spelling according to usual pronunciation; older forms of names, and the alterations they have undergone in course of time; local variations in spelling; exhibiting the tendency of names to assume different forms in different localities; variations in the same name for pleasure; and changes owing to illiteracy and other causes.

The report also contained examples of the use of entirely different names interchangeably by the same family, a practice which prevails in some parts of Ireland, many being cases of translation of Irish names into English, or vice versa, or equivalents, modifications, or corruptions of them. A list is also given showing cases of English names and their Irish equivalents met with in the Registration Records. The work also contained an Alphabetical List of Surname Varieties and Synonymes, and a Table showing the respective Poor Law Unions and which many of the peculiarities had been found.

The reception which that book met with at the hands of the Press and the Public was gratifying, and I determined to attempt, in connection with the Census of 1891, the work of extracting and classifying the Surnames of the population generally on the line fully followed in 1851. An unexpected occurrence, however, prevented this. The Census which previously afforded complete data for the purpose were, in 1891, rendered imperfect, owing to the insertion of a clause in the Act of Parliament, directing that Inmates of Public Institutions, initials only should be given in the Enumeration Form.

The Surnames of a considerable number of persons were thus omitted from these returns, and the question arose whether with these imperfect data, the work should be abandoned, or whether the general results could not be obtained with sufficient accuracy from other sources.

The Indexes of the General Register Office afford a reliable basis on which to form conclusions regarding Surnames, and though in the Index for any one year all the Surnames of the country will not be found, yet if a name be of frequent occurrence it is certain to be in the Index, the number of entries opposite the name indicating its relative frequency with other Surnames.

The Indexes further afford facilities for distributing the Surnames over the country, in the case of each entry the Poor Law Union is given.

In view of these facts, I decided to take these Indexes as the basis of my inquiry, which was confirmed in my determination by the opinion of that eminent scholar, the late R. C. Reeves, Lord Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore, and President of the Royal Irish Academy, who encouraged me to undertake the task, and promised me his cordial assistance. His death, however, unhappily deprived me of the benefit of his valuable aid and advice.

I may mention that both in England and Scotland the subject of personal nomenclature has received attention, and statistics relating thereto, derived from the Indexes of Births and Marriages, have been published by the respective Registrars-General, to which I refer.

I have divided the consideration of the subject as follows :—

- 1st. The principal Surnames in Ireland compared with those in other portions of the Kingdom.
- 2nd. The Derivation of Surnames in Ireland.
- 3rd. Surnames in Ireland Ethnologically considered.
- 4th. The Local Distribution of Surnames in Ireland.

CHAPTER II.

PRINCIPAL SURNAMES IN IRELAND COMPARED WITH THOSE IN OTHER PORTIONS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

Following Table exhibits One Hundred of the Principal Surnames in Ireland (including varieties) arranged in order of numerical strength, together with the Estimated Number of persons bearing each Name.

NOTE—The Surnames indicated by an asterisk occur under two or more different spellings.

be seen from the foregoing Tables that the name "Murphy" stands first in Ireland, in order of numerical strength, representing an estimated number of 62,600 persons (or 13·3 per thousand of the population), and that in both England and Scotland the name "Smith" occupies the first place, and, being, it is estimated, in England and Wales (in the year 1853) 253,600 persons (or 13·8 per thousand of the population), and in Scotland (in the year 1863) 44,200, or 14·2 per thousand of the population.

Second place on the Irish List is held by the name "Kelly," representing 55,900 persons (or 9·2 per thousand of the population). In the English Tables "Jones" has the second place, representing, it is estimated, 242,100 people (or 13·2 per thousand). It is the most common name in the County of Wales, and its prevalence there has given it the high place it occupies on the List of the country generally. The Registrar-General for England states that in some years the name contributed to the registers a larger number of Births than even the Smiths. In Scotland the second place is held by "McDonald," the estimated population bearing the name being 36,600, or 10·9 per thousand.

Third place in Ireland is filled by "Sullivan," the number of persons of which name it is estimated amounts to 43,600 (or 9·2 per thousand). In England "Williams" is the third name in importance, representing 159,900 persons (or 8·7 per thousand). In Scotland "Brown" is the third, reckoning 33,800 (or 10·9 per thousand).

Names among the first Fifty on the Irish List appear on the Lists for one or both of the Kingdoms of the Kingdom. Thus "Smith" is 5th in Ireland and 1st in England and Scotland; "Jones" is 18th in Ireland, and 17th in Scotland; "Moore" is 20th in Ireland, and 39th in Scotland; "Wilson" is 26th in Ireland, 11th in England, and 8th in Scotland; "Campbell" is 31st in Ireland and 7th in Scotland; "Clarke" (or "Clark") is 32nd in Ireland, 9th (taking both England and Scotland), and 18th in Scotland; "Johnston" appears 33rd in Ireland, and 16th in Scotland; "Hughes" appears 34th in Ireland, and 19th in England; "Brown" is 37th in Ireland, 6th in England, and 3rd in Scotland; "Martin" is 38th in Ireland, 31st in England, and 48th in Scotland; "Thompson" or "Thomson" is 42nd in Ireland, 15th in England, and 4th in Scotland; "O'Connell" is 50th in Ireland, 22nd in England, and 41st in Scotland.

It may also be observed that among the second fifty names on the Irish List, several appear in the Lists of England or Scotland. Thus,— "Stewart" is 58th in Ireland, and 6th in Scotland; "Ward" is 73rd in Ireland, and 12th in England; "Ward" is 78th in Ireland, and 30th in England; "Graham" is 82nd in Ireland, and 40th in Scotland; "Bell" is 89th in Ireland, and 47th in Scotland; "McDonald" is 95th in Ireland, and 10th in Scotland; and "McDonald" which is 95th in Ireland, is 2nd in Scotland.

It is perceived, however, that most of the names in Ireland with the larger numbers are of Irish origin, representing the names of Irish Clans and Septs, such as the Murphys, O'Briens, Byrnes, Ryans, Connors, O'Neill, Reillys, Doyleys, McCarthys, Dohertys, &c.

Such Clans are similarly represented in the List for Scotland, such as the McDonalds, McGregors, McLeods, McKays, Campbells, Stewarts, Camerons, &c.

CHAPTER III.

DERIVATION OF SURNAMES.

The consideration of the Derivation of Surnames forms an interesting branch of study, but it would be impossible within the limits of this Report to enter fully into the subject, and all that can be attempted is to give a brief summary of its main sub-divisions as applicable to this Country.

Surnames in Ireland may be divided with reference to their derivation into several classes, viz. :—

1. FROM PERSONAL NAMES.
2. FROM RANK OR OCCUPATION.
3. FROM THE ANIMAL, VEGETABLE, AND MINERAL KINGDOMS.
4. FROM LOCALITY.
5. FROM PERSONAL PECULIARITIES OR ATTRIBUTES.
6. OTHER SURNAMES.

1. The following Examples may be given of Surnames derived from Personal names :—

CELTIC NAMES.

McShane, .	(MacShawn —Irish. Son of John).	O'Toole, .	(O'Tuathail —Irish. The Son of Tuathal).
McFadden, .	(MacPaidin —Irish. Son of little Patrick).	McDonnell, .	(MacDomhnaill — Irish. Son of Donall).
McAndrew, .	(MacAindris — Irish. Son of Andrew).	McKeown, .	(MacEoghain —Irish. Son of Owen).
McHugh, .	(MacAedha —Irish. Son of Hugh).	McRory, .	(MacRuadhri —Irish. Son of dhri (Rory).
McDermott .	(MacDiarmada — Irish. Son of Diarmaid).
O'Ferrall, .	(O'Feargail —Irish. The descendant of Feargal).

Many Surnames derived from Celtic Names are compounded with the word servant (or disciple) of—such as—

Kilbride, .	(GiollaBridghid —the Servant of St. Bridget).	Gilchrist, .	(GiollaChriosd — the Servant of Christ).
Gilpatrick, .	(GiollaPadraic —the Servant of St. Patrick).	Gildea, .	(GiollaDé —the Servant of God).
		Gilfoyle, .	(GiollaPhoil —the Servant of Phoil).

Maol is also prefixed to the names of Saints, signifying a bald or tonsured person, or the spiritual servant of such Saint, as—Maol-Dubhan [Maoldun],—the Servant of St. Dubhan. Anglicised—Muldoon.

ENGLISH NAMES.

Abraham.	Fergus.	Jacob.	Lawrence.	Roberts.	Thompson.
Adams.	Ferguson.	James.	Mathews.	Robinson.	Thomson.
Adamson.	Henry.	Jameson.	Paul.	Rodgers.	Wicks.
Davidson.	Jackson.	Johnson.	Peters.	Stevenson.	Williams.

2. Surnames from Rank or Occupation.—The following may be selected by way of illustration :—

CELTIC NAMES.

McGowan, .	(Gobha —Irish—a Smith, son of the Smith).	Colgan, .	(Colg —Irish—a sword, or spear).
Breheny, .	(Breathamh —Irish—a Judge).	McCraith, .	(Craith —Irish—to weave, or Weaver).
Cleary, .	(Cleireach —Irish—a Clerk).	Davin, .	(Daimh —Irish—a Poet).
Ward, .	(Bhard —Irish—a Bard).	McIntyre, .	(Mac-an-t-Saoir —Irish—the Workman).

ENGLISH NAMES.

Butler.	Deacon.	Fuller.	Mason.	Prior.
Carpenter.	Draper.	Gardiner.	Mercer.	Sexton.
Chandler.	Farmer.	Gardner.	Naylor.	Sheppard.
Clarke.	Forrester.	Glover.	Page.	Smith.
Cooke.	Forster.	Harper.	Porter.	Taylor.
Cooper.	Fowler.	Hunter.	Potter.	Usher.

Surnames are taken from natural objects in the Animal, Vegetable, and Mineral such as:—

CELTIC NAMES.

...	(from carraicc —a rock).	Darragh,	(from dair —an oak).
...	(from cloch —a stone).	Mullally,	(from eala —a swan).
...	(from colum —a dove).	Quilty,	(from coillte —woods).
...	(from coinin —a rabbit).	Sheedy,	(from sioda —silk).

ENGLISH NAMES.

Clay.	Fox.	Moss.	Silver.	Veale.
Crowe.	Hare.	Peacock.	Spratt.	Waters.
Deer.	Heron.	Pidgeon.	Sturgeon.	Woods.
Dove.	Hogg.	Rabbit.	Swan.	Woulfe.
Forrest.	Lamb.

Names derived from Locality.—Surnames derived from locality, which in England and from a large class, are but rarely met with in this country, and in most of these cases doubt exists as to whether the surname has been acquired from the locality.

Amongst surnames amongst others are the names of localities in Ireland:—

...	Borris.	Galway.	Kilkenny.	Monaghan.
...	Cashell (Cashel).	Kells.	Limerick.	Monahan.
...	Cavan.	Kilcullen.	Longford.	Pallas.

Amongst names of localities in England and Scotland are also found amongst surnames in
:—

ham. }	Carlisle. }	Galloway.	Glasgow.	Lincoln.	Peebles.
ham. }	Carlile. }	Girvan.	Hastings.	Paisley.	Sherwood.
ge.

Names derived from Personal Peculiarities or Attributes, such as:—

CELTIC NAMES.

...	(Ruadh —red).	Casey,	(Cathaiseach —valiant).
...	(Dubh —black).	Dempsey,	(Diomusach —arrogant).
...	(Laidir —strong).	Brody,	(Brodach —proud).
...	(Dall —blind).	Corcoran,	(Corcurach —purple or red).
...	(Gor —short).

ENGLISH NAMES.

Gray.	Long.	Short. }	Strong.	Wise. }
Jolly.	Meek.	Shortt. }	Swift.	Wyse. }
Little. }	Merry.	Small.	White.
Lyttle. }

Surnames.—There are many surnames not falling in any of the above classes, such as

Names of the Body (Celtic Names)—Kinnavy (cnamh—Irish—a bone); McCosh (cos—Irish—a foot); McClave (lamh—Irish—the hand); (English Names)—Beard, Foote, Head, Legge.

Names of the Seasons, as Spring, Summers, Winter.
Names of the Compass, as North, South, East, West.
Natural Objects, as Field, Flood, Hill, Snow.
Other Sources, as Church, Ferry, Hood, Hunt, Kirk.

It is interesting to quote here the remarks of the Registrar-General for England and Wales on the derivation of Family Names found in those countries.

Major Graham remarked in his 16th Annual Report, already referred to:—"The most remarkable circumstance presented by the Indexes is the extraordinary number and variety of the surnames of the English people. Derived from almost every imaginable object, from the names of places, from occupations, and employments, from personal peculiarities, from the Christian name of the father, from the Animal and Vegetable kingdoms, from things animate and inanimate; their variedness is as remarkable as their singularity is often striking. Some of the terms which swell the list are so odd, and even ridiculous, that it is difficult to assign any satisfactory reason for their adoption. At the first instance as family names, unless indeed, as has been conjectured, they were merely sobriquets, which neither the first bearers nor their posterity could avoid."

Referring to Welsh surnames he stated:—"In Wales, however, the surnames, if surnames be called, do not present the same variety, most of them having been formed in a simple manner from the Christian or fore-name of the father in the Genitive case, son being understood. Thus John's son became Evans, John's son Jones, &c. Others were derived from the father's name combined with a form of the word ap or hab (son of), by which Hugh ap Howell became Powell, Evan ap Iwan became Pugh, and in like manner were formed nearly all the Welsh surnames beginning with the letters B and P. Hereditary surnames were not in use even amongst the gentry of Wales until the time of Henry VIII., nor were they generally established until a much later period; in the present day they can scarcely be said to be adopted amongst the lower classes in the wild parts of the country, where, as the marriage registers show, the Christian name of the father still frequently serves as the patronymic of the son in the manner just described."

With respect to Cornish names the Report states:—"From the circumstance of the Welsh having a British origin it might be supposed that the Welsh people and the inhabitants of Cornwall exhibit some analogous principles in the construction of their surnames; such, however, is not the case. The Cornish surnames are mostly local, derived from words of British root, and are often strikingly peculiar. A large number have the prefix Tre, a town; the words Pol, a pool, Pen, a head, Ros, a heath, and Lan, a church, are also of frequent occurrence in surnames."

With regard to the derivation of names in Scotland, the Registrar-General for that country, in his 6th Report, remarks:—"Almost all the names of our Border and Highland Clans are of the first class" [Surnames derived from Patronymics], "and they are peculiarly Scotch, not belonging to England nor to Ireland. These Surnames include all those beginning with Mac, as Macgregor, Macdougall, etc., besides those simple ones, as Fraser, Douglas, Cameron, &c." . . . "The Surnames derived from rank and occupation are very numerous, but not so common to England as to Scotland." . . . "Surnames taken from the locality in which persons originally resided form a very numerous class, and they also are, to a great extent, common to Scotland, seeing that there is scarcely a county, parish, town, river, or remarkable spot, which has its name perpetuated in the Surnames." . . . "The sobriquets perpetuated as surnames are, perhaps, the most varied of all, and embrace every personal or mental quality supposed to be characteristic in the different individuals to whom they were originally given."

The personal Names in the Isle of Man are of considerable interest in connection with Surnames, as that Island has passed through phases of occupancy somewhat similar to those of Ireland. Its history may be divided into three periods: the first, when it was inhabited by a people similar in race and language to the Irish; the second, the period of Scandinavian domination; the third, the time during which it has been under English dominion. The names in the Index represent each of these periods. As in Ireland, the largest number of names are derived from Celtic origin; some are from Scandinavian roots, and there are now a large number traceable to English sources.

On visiting the Island, I was much struck by the peculiar forms many names had assumed, differing from those found in Ireland, though evidently derived from the same sources. The name "Clucas" is the Manx form of Lucas, both names being derived from the Celtic name of the son of Luke. "Cannell," a name peculiar to the Isle of Man, is derived from the Celtic name of the son of Conall. The Irish modern form is M'Connell.

"Kermode," another Manx name, is contracted from the Celtic name MacDiarmid, the Irish modern form M'Dermott. "Mylchreest" is derived from the Celtic name of the son of the servant of Christ. The modern Irish form is Gilchrist. Many other instances could be adduced.

SURNAMES IN IRELAND ETHNOLOGICALLY CONSIDERED.

CELTIC NAMES.

ent population of Ireland is a mixture of a number of different races in which the predominant element.

bulk of the most common names in the country are undoubtedly of Celtic origin. m still retain the prefixes O and Mac, the former peculiar to Ireland and the latter Ireland and Scotland. In many cases, however, these prefixes have been dropped. r of common occurrence to find in the same record Celtic names written with the l Mac and without them.

ible now, in some cases, to trace whether families are of Celtic or English descent, as English settlers took Irish names, and Irish families were compelled to adopt mes.

ce of 1366, it was provided, inter alia, that "Every Englishman do use the English be named by an English name, leaving off entirely the manner of naming used by nd in 1465 (5 Ed. IV., cap. 3), a law was passed enacting "that every Irishman that t or amongst Englishmen in the County of Dublin, Myeth, Vriell, and Kildare o him an English Surname of one town, as Sutton, Chester, Trym, Skryne, Corke, colour, as white, blacke, browne; or arte or science, as smith or carpenter; or office, er .

By comparing the foregoing Lists with the Table at the end of this Report, it can far these families are at present represented in the localities formerly inhabited by the country at large. The above Tables, however, exhibit the information for counties, whereas the Tables on pages 27-29 and 31-73 are compiled by Registration Counties, and entire Poor Law Unions most nearly representing the area of the county proper. They are for the most part slight, but in a few instances the name may be found in the county immediately adjoining.

It will be seen that some of these names have spread all over Ireland, such as Mac Kennedy, Maguire, Quinn, &c. Some of these Families have disappeared, or have migrated to part of the country, or their names have become so altered in process of time as to be of identification.

In many cases, however, the descendants of the ancient families are still domiciled in the tracts as their forefathers, as shown in the following instances:—

The MacCubes were a warlike clan originally from County Monaghan, but subsequently in County Cavan. At the present time they are largely represented in the population of these counties.

The MacCarthys were anciently Kings and Princes of Desmond, Southern Munster, and Cork, the greater part of Kerry, and portions of Waterford and Tipperary. They are now resident principally in the Counties of Cork, Kerry, and Limerick, more than 100,000 being found in County Cork.

Dermotts were ancient Princes of Moylurg, having their territories in the Barony of County Roscommon, and parts of the Parishes of Islandeady, Turlough and Breaffy, in Mayo and Sligo. Their chief fortress was on an island in Lough Key, near Boyle, and they were hereditary Marshals of Connaught. At the present time Connaught is the province in which the MacDermotts are principally found, and half of the persons of the name in that province are in County Roscommon.

The MacMahons formerly possessed the greater part of the Baronies of Moyarta and Moyarta in the County Clare, in which county the predominant name now is McMahon.

The Byrnes anciently possessed the greater part of the Barony of Ballinacor, County Wicklow, and were powerful Chiefs in that part of the country. Byrne is the leading name now in the County Wicklow, Dublin, and Louth.

The natural habitat of the O'Driscolls was the Barony of West Carbery, in County Cork, where they were Lord of Baltimore, and possessed the Island of Cape Clear and adjacent territory. The majority of the present Driscolls are to be found there.

The O'Doghertys were a powerful Sept in County Donegal, and were located in Inishowen, in which O'Dogherty was Lord. The Oghertys or Dohertys are numerous represented at the present time.

The O'Flahertys were originally located in the Barony of Clare, County Galway, but in the 17th century, having been expelled from this territory, they settled in the Barony of Moycullen, and were styled Lords of Iar Conacht or West Connaught. A large number of the O'Flahertys are now found in the Baronies of Moycullen, Ross, and Ballinahinch, in County Galway.

The O'Gallaghers were a warlike Clan in the Baronies of Raphoe and Tirhugh, County Donegal. As seen from the Table on page 28, Gallagher is now the most numerous represented name in County Donegal.

At times the O'Keeffes were Marshals and chief military leaders of Desmond. They possessed several castles, and were styled Princes of Fermoy. The principal county for the O'Keeffes at present is Cork.

The O'Mahonys were anciently located in Cork and Kerry, where they were powerful Chiefs and were styled Princes. They had several castles along the sea-coast. In County Cork an O'Mahony was Lord of Ivaugh, in the Barony of West Carbery, and an O'Mahony was Chief in County Kerry. In County Kerry there was a Chief of the name in the Barony of Iveragh, and O'Mahonys in the Barony of Clanmaurice. The majority of persons of the name of O'Mahony are still found in these two counties.

The Mallesys were celebrated Chiefs whose territory comprised the present Baronies of Mallesys and Burrishoole in the County Mayo. The Mallesys and O'Mallesys are now located in the two baronies named, and in that of Erris, in County Mayo.

The O'Meaghers were formerly powerful Chiefs possessing the Barony of Ikerrin, in County Kerry, of which O'Meagher was Lord. The Meaghers or Mahers are principally found in the County Kerry at present.

The O'Mearas had an extensive territory in the Barony of Upper Ormond, County Tipperary, in which O'Meara was a Chief. The name of their principal residence, Tuam-UI-Meara, is still retained in the name of Toomyvara. The Mearas or O'Mearas are still numerous in that locality.

The Moriarty is now largely represented in County Kerry, in which county the O'Moriartys were formerly located in the Barony of Dunkerron.

The Mulveys were a Chief in the Barony of Mohill, County Leitrim, in which county about 50 persons bearing the name Mulvey are now found.

The Noonans occur chiefly in Cork, in which county the O'Noonans formerly dwelt. There was a Chief in Duhallow Barony, and there were O'Noonans in Barrymore and Kinalea

There were two branches of the O'Ryan or O'Mulrians—the Carlow branch, in which O'Ryan was Prince of Idrone—and the Tipperary branch, in which county one O'Ryan Owey and Arra, and another Chief of Borrisoleigh. They also had possessions in County Wick. The Ryans are now found in the Counties of Carlow, Kilkenny, Limerick, and Tipperary, the latter county having by far the largest number. The Ryans of Tipperary are in some places distinguished in the records by additional names appended to the surname—Ryan (Bawn); Ryan (Buckly); Ryan (Cooper); Ryan (Cormack); Ryan (Cormack Dalton); Ryan (Dan); Ryan (Jack); Ryan (James); Ryan (Larry); Ryan (Ned); Ryan (Russell); Ryan (Tim Daniel).

There were several branches of the O'Sullivan family; one was located in County Kerry, they were Princes of Beara, now Bere and Bantry Baronies, and were called O'Sullivan. Another (O'Sullivan Mor), occupied portion of County Kerry, where they were Lords of the soil. At the present time the Sullivans and O'Sullivans are most numerous in the County of Kerry.

The O'Tooles were celebrated Princes of Imaile, in County Wicklow, and had their Glen of Imaile which still retains that name. Their power extended into County Wicklow. A considerable number of Tooles are still resident in the County Wicklow.

DANISH NAMES.

From the Ninth to the Twelfth Centuries the Ostmen or Danes came to Ireland and settled themselves on the seaboard. They founded the Kingdom of Dublin A.D., 852, and their possessions were Dublin, Wexford, Waterford, Cork, and Limerick. Some of the surnames now traceable to Danish origin. Amongst these may be mentioned Betagh, Coppinger, Dowd, Goole or Drumgoole, Gould, Harold, Palmer, Plunkett, Skiddy, Sweetman (Swedeman). The name "Ost" is met with in County Wicklow.

Dr. MacDermott, in his annotations to the Annals of Ireland by the Four Masters, states:—"Many families of Danish origin took Irish surnames, prefixing O and Mac, so that their descent cannot now be ascertained, and several of their chiefs took Irish Christian names, that of Patrick in honour of the patron saint of Ireland. The Danes and Norwegians possessed Dublin and some other parts of the country, and having maintained their possession there for more than 300 years, there is consequently much of Danish blood in the Dublin and Meath, particularly in Fingall, and there are many families of Danish descent by intermarriages with the old Milesian Irish."

ANGLO-NORMAN NAMES.

The circumstances connected with the Anglo-Norman invasion need not be referred to, it suffices to say that through it the second great graft on our Celtic stock took place, and many of the present surnames, notwithstanding the changes in form and spelling which time has made, being traceable to an Anglo-Norman source. As examples the following may be given:

Barry, Bellew, Bermingham, Burke, Carew, Clare, Cogan, Dalton, Darcy, De Courcy, Dillon, FitzEustace (Eustace), Fitzgerald, Fitzhenry, Fitzmaurice, Fitzsimons, Gernon, Grace, Hussey, Keating, Lacy, Le Poer, Marshall, Montmorency, Mortimer, Nangle, Petit, Prendergast, Purcell, Roche, Staunton, Taaffe, Talbot, Tuite, Tyrrell, Verdon, Vesey.

Dr. MacDermott, in a note to the "Annals of the Four Masters," states:—"The Anglo-Norman or English families adopted Irish surnames:—The de Burgos or Burkes, of whom one took the name of MacWilliam, and some of them that of MacPhilip; the de Angulos or Anglos, of Meath and Mayo, changed the name to MacCostello; the de Exeters, of Mayo, to MacJ. Barretts, of Mayo, to MacWattin; the Stauntons, of Mayo, to M'Aveeley; . . . the Berminghams, of Connaught and other places, to MacFeorais, or Peorais; . . . the Fitz of the King's County, to MacRuddery; . . . the Poers, of Kilkenny and Wick, to MacShere; the Butlers, to MacPierce; the Fitzgeralds, to MacThomas and MacMaurice; the Courcys, of Cork, to MacPatrick; the Barrys, of Cork, to MacAdam; and many others in the same manner."

ENGLISH NAMES.

Members of English came to Ireland from the 12th to the 18th century, and from these great bulk of the English names now found in Ireland are derived. These names are, though in many cases, as compared with the old Celtic names, they represent but a few of persons.

Following are a few specimens of English names numerously represented:—

Andrews; Arnold; Ashe; Atkinson; Baker; Barr; Barton; Bates; Bennett; Berry; Bolton; Bradshaw; Brooks; Canning; Carlisle; Carter; Christy; Cooper; Cox; Davies; Edwards; English; Field; Fisher; Freeman; Goodwin; Hall; Harper; Harris; Hawthorne; Henry; Hewitt; Hill; Holmes; Hopkins; Hunt; Hunter; Jackson; Johnson; Johnston; Kidd; King; Lamb; Lane; Little; Long; Mitchell; Morton; Nash; Pearson; Richardson; Roberts; Robinson; Salmon; Shaw; Short; Simpson; Small; Smith; Taylor; Thornton; Turner; Walker; Wall; Waters; Watson; Webb; Webster; Williams; Woods; Wright.

CORNISH NAMES.

Cornish or Briton names are also found in Ireland, such as Jagoe, Lanyon, Pascoe, Pender, Rose, Tredennick, Tresilian, Trevelyan, Vivian, &c.

WELSH NAMES.

Immigrants also found their way into Ireland. The name "Walsh"—Irish, Brannagh or Briton or Welshman—occurs in early times in the counties of Cork, Dublin, Kerry, Limerick, Upperary, Waterford, Wexford, and Wicklow; and at the present day the name is found in nearly every county in Ireland, especially in Cork, Mayo, Waterford, Galway, and Wexford. According to some ancient authorities, Welshmen of the following names came to Ireland after the English Invasion:—Howell, Lawless, Lillis, Lynagh, Lynnott, and

The colony from Wales, yet not consisting solely or even mainly of Welsh, was formed in the Baronies of Forth and Bargo, county Wexford. It is supposed to have been made at the time of the Norman Invasion. The interest in this colony is centred in the fact that it continued to exist separate from the native Irish, and maintained its peculiarities, its language down to a recent period; and traces of its special characteristics are still to be seen.

Information was made to this colony in a series of returns supplied to Sir William Petty, written in 1685. In them it is stated "they preserve their first language and almost only understand English, unless elsewhere educated." Also that "they observe the same form of apparel their fathers first used," which is, "according to the English mode, of very fine exquisitely dressed clothes, but not costlie; that they invariably profess and maintain the same faith and form of worship, and that "they seldom dispose of their children in marriage but unto natives or such as are willing to reside in the Barony." Several peculiar customs and usages of the colony are also mentioned in the returns referred to.

General Vallancey visited the colony and embodied the result of his researches in a paper published in the Second Volume of the Transactions of the Royal Irish Academy, and in which is a specimen of the old dialect of the colony.

He says:—"This Colony have preserved their ancient manners, customs, and language; and in consequence of every inch of ground, the natives could never obtain a re-establishment therein. As the population increased some of the English have been obliged to remove into the neighbouring parishes. Within these fifty years, and by an intercourse with the Irish the language of these has become corrupted, and these by their connections with their kindred remaining in the parishes of Bargo and Forth have in some measure introduced this corrupted dialect there."

Amongst the names of the old colonists at that date—"Hore," "Cod," "Stafford," "Cossiter," "Sinnott," "Stephen," "Quiney," and "Walsh."

In Hall's Ireland also (published in 1841), there are references to this interesting

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hall observe:—"The baronies of Bargy and Forth, which extend coast from the Bay of Bannow to the Bay of Wexford, form perhaps the most remarkable district of Ireland, its inhabitants being to this day 'a peculiar people'—the peninsular position of these baronies—the sea on the one side, and the mountain on the other—contributed, no doubt in a great degree, to the safety and stability of the County. It has not been for the numerous castles, or, more properly speaking, 'fortalices,' the form so remarkable a feature in the landscape, the courage and daring of the natives have caused their extermination. Over a surface of about 40,000 acres there are still remains of fifty-nine such buildings; and the sites of many more can be still pointed

A paper on the subject of the dialect of the Barony of Forth was read by the Right Rev. late President of Maynooth College, at the Dublin Meeting of the British Association in 1857.

After an examination of the fragments of the language extant he states:—"I venture to conclude that the barony of Forth language is a lineal descent of the English introduced by the first settlers, modernized in its forms, and also, though in a less degree, in its vocabulary."

Dr. Russell also remarks—"Like Irish in what used to be the Irish-speaking districts, the language has become unfashionable in Forth itself, and the young generation are unwilling to acknowledge an acquaintance with it, much less to employ it as a medium of ordinary

Dr. Mitchell, Inspector of Registration, who visited the locality in June last, states:—"There has been a very great change over the face of this district since Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hall—50 years ago—described its inhabitants as still 'a peculiar people.' The change is easily explained by the opening up of the whole country—the district markets—and the facilities for travel afforded by the railway, train and steamboat. There is no doubt, I think, that the present inhabitants are the offspring of intermarriage with native Irish. It is only among the most illiterate that a small number of words of their old dialect is now used. Of the surnames given in the early records, two, viz., Stephen and Quiney, appear to have died out in these Baronies, and others are still common all over the county and beyond. The names Codd, Stafford, Sinnott, Hore, Rossiter, &c., are very common in the town of Wexford."

SCOTTISH NAMES.

From an early period there were migrations of Scotch from Scotland to Ireland, and many settled in Ulster, but the formal Plantation of Ulster took place in the seventeenth century, and the majority of these settlers were Scotch.

On reference to the Table at the end of this Report the very frequent occurrence of Scotch names in the Province of Ulster will be seen. The following may be given as examples:—Campbell, Scott, Miller, McKenzie, Ross, McKay, Paterson, Fraser, Morrison, Cameron, McGregor, Kerr, Graham, Sinclair, Gordon.

HUGUENOT NAMES.

Representatives of other races have from time to time settled in this country; from these may be mentioned the French and Flemish Huguenots. The Irish Parliament in 1697 passed an Act granting letters of naturalization to the refugees. The Duke of Ormonde, then Lord of the Kingdom, patronized them, and through his instrumentality, colonies of them were founded at Kilkenny, Portarlington, Waterford, Cork, and Lisburn.

They started manufactures of silk, gloves, lace, cloth, and linen. The manufacture of "Poplin" in the Liberties of Dublin had its origin with these industrious foreigners, and of Ireland they established the manufacture of linen and cambric.

Many Huguenot names are still amongst us; the following may be given as examples:—Blacquiere, Boileau, Chaigneau, Du Bedat, Champion, Chenevix, Corcellis, Crommel, Drelincourt, Dubourdieu, Du Cros, Fleury, Gausson, Logier, Guerin, Hazard (Hassall), Le Fevre, Léfroy, Lefanu, Maturin, Perrin, Saurin, Trench, Des Vignolles.

been furnished by Dr. Mitchell with the following notes regarding the Huguenot settlement at Portarlinton at present :—

at the present time (June, 1893) in the Townland of 'Deerpark' near Portarlinton, a man of pure Huguenot descent."

Blanc, in his book on 'The Huguenots' (1867), states, the Blancs, butchers, transmitted the name from father to son for more than 150 years, and they are still recognisable at Portarlinton under the name of 'Blong.' Not only is this so, but there are three families of them, two of which have retained (or returned to) the original spelling of the surname Blanc—one in our Register Books, and the trade of butchering is still followed by the family. The Medical Officer of Cloneygowan Dispensary District, Dr. Tabuteau, represents another Huguenot family, and his father, the late Dr. Tabuteau (now eighteen years dead), was at the time when Divine service was conducted in French. The surnames Boileau and Desbois have disappeared from this locality only a few years ago. General Boileau and Major Desbois, with their families having left Portarlinton. There is an aged carpenter here, 'La Combre,' of Huguenot descent, so that this name also, as well as another, 'Champ,' may be added to the 'Corcellis' family now spell it Corsellis, and the full surname 'Des Vignolles' still

GERMAN PALATINATE NAMES.

In the eighteenth Century there was a German migration into Ireland from the Palatinate of the Rhine. In 1709 a fleet was sent to Rotterdam by Queen Anne, which brought over about 7,000 Huguenots to England. About 3,000 were sent to North America, where they settled in Pennsylvania and North Carolina. The remainder, except a few families which remained in England, came over to Ireland, and settled principally in the County of Limerick. They were granted 10 acres of land for each man, woman, and child, at 5s. an acre, and the Government paid their rent for twenty years. They were an industrious and frugal race, but their numbers were subsequently largely reduced by emigration to America, and at the present day but a few, it is said, remain.

The historian of Limerick, describes thus this German Colony as it existed in 1780 :—"The Palatines preserve their language, but it is declining; they sleep between two beds; they appoint an elder to whom they appeal in all disputes. They are industrious men, and have leases from the Government of the land at reasonable rents; they are, consequently, better fed and clothed than the majority of Irish peasants. Besides, their mode of husbandry and crops are better than those of their neighbours. They have by degrees left off their sour krout, and feed on potatoes, rye, oatmeal and wheaten bread, some meat and fowls, of which they rear many. * * * They are very industrious * * *. Besides their domestic employments and the care of their families, they reap the corn, plough the ground, and assist the men in everything. In short, they have benefited the county by increasing tillage, and are a laborious, independent race. They are mostly employed on their own small farms."

Mrs. S. C. Hall describes the "Palatines" in 1840 as "different in character, and distinct from the people of the country." They state :—"The elders of the family preserve in a great measure the language, customs, and religion of their old country; but the younger mingle and marry with their Irish neighbours."

Mr. Hall has kindly furnished me with the following remarks regarding the present condition of the Palatines :—

My personal inquiries made on the spot (May, 1893), that Palatines bearing the following names at the present time occupy farms in and round Court Matrix, Ballingran, and Ballybaker, Bovanzier, Bowen (Adam Bowen was one of my informants, interviewed on his 100-acre farm near Court Matrix), Doube (pronounced 'Dobe'), Delmege (or as they themselves pronounce it), Gilliard, Latchford, Ligier (pronounced 'Leg-iar,' with a hard 'g'), Millar, Lodwig, Modlar, Pyper, Reynard (pronounced 'Reinart'); Ruttle, Switzer (Jacob Switzer was another of my informants, whom I interviewed on his farm at Court Matrix), Teskey, Travers.

The 19 names undoubtedly represent more than double that number of families in the list given above; several of them also occur at Adare. There are several families of the name 'Delmege,' and 'Ruttle,' and so on.

When I got to Askeaton District, I found a Palatine name, 'Ruttle,' on a signboard (a very unusual circumstance). Generally, Palatine sons succeed their fathers on the same farm allotted to their ancestors in 1709. And however those may have fared who have since Limerick for America, the Palatines here at present are tenant farmers, as a rule, like settlers, many of the 8-acre lots having been consolidated into larger farms.

“At Court Matrix, I saw the house of the Rev. Mr. Doube—a Palatine Clergyman stationed in Co. Wicklow. When I got to Pallaskenry, I found along with some of the already given, others, viz. :—Neazor, Heavenor, Smyth (spelled with a ‘y’ and originally

“The Christian names for males, Nehemiah, Christopher, Adam, Jacob, Jethro, Julius, and for females—Dorothy, &c., are still of common occurrence.

“Differing originally in language (though even the oldest of the present generation know of the German tongue, spoken or written), as well as in race and religion from the nation whom they were planted, these Palatines still cling together like the members of a family, and worship together. Most of them have a distinctly foreign type of features, and are stout and swarthy in complexion, dark-haired and brown-eyed. The comfortable houses built in the 17th century are now in ruins. I traced, with Jacob Switzer’s aid, the original “Square” of Court Matrix, the ruined walls still standing; I also traced in the very centre of this square the foundation of a little Meeting House in which John Wesley occasionally preached to them in the year 1765. Modern houses stand there now, but not closely grouped together. They are all in appearance, some thatched, some slated, some of one storey, others of two. Near each is a neat little flower garden in front, and very many have an orchard beside, or immediately adjacent to the house. There is all the appearance of thrift and industry among them.”

JEWISH NAMES.

The last colony to which attention need be called is that resulting from the recent immigration. For many years Jews have been resident in Dublin and other chief cities, but during the decade, 1881–90, their numbers were largely increased by the arrival of Russian and Polish Jews. Most of these have settled in Dublin, where, on the south side of the city, they have formed a Jewish Quarter, and opened several Synagogues. The Marriage and Birth Registers of this Office now afford abundant evidence of their presence in our midst.

As shown by the Census Returns, they principally follow the occupations of—Clerks, Commercial Travellers, Drapers, Dressmakers, General Dealers, Merchants, and Assistants, Tailors and Tailoresses.

The following may be given as examples of the names of the Jewish Settlers :—

Coplan.	Maisell.	Statzumsky.	Wedecel.
Fridberg.	Matufsky.	Stuppel.	Weiner.
Greenberg.	Rabinovitch.	Wachman.	Winstock.
Hesselberg.	Rossin.

In addition to the foregoing there are a number of foreigners who have settled in Ireland from France, Germany, Italy, and other countries, and whose names appear in our Indexes.

Though “Birthplace” is not an accurate test of nationality, it may be of interest to refer to the following Table extracted from the Census of 1891, which shows the Birthplaces of persons enumerated in Ireland according to each Census from 1841 to 1891 :—

CENSUS PERIODS.	BIRTHPLACE.
	Province of Leinster.	Province of Munster.	Province of Ulster.	Province of Connaught.	Great Britain.
					England and Wales.	Scotland.
1841.	1,332,243	2,394,988	2,390,028	1,423,257	21,552	8,583
1851.	1,614,160	1,853,628	2,015,424	1,018,446	34,454	12,312
1861.	1,398,956	1,502,669	1,905,886	913,052	50,761	16,861
1871.	1,266,010	1,375,600	1,815,901	849,246	67,881	20,311
1881.	1,203,364	1,316,273	1,720,742	821,908	69,382	22,328
1891.	1,113,585	1,154,803	1,587,271	725,722	74,523	27,322

From this Table it will be seen that the number of persons resident in Ireland at each Census, but born elsewhere, has largely increased at each decennial period.

CHAPTER V.

DISTRIBUTION OF SURNAMES.

able at the end of this Report, will be found the Surnames in Ireland represented by and upwards in the Births Index for 1890, and the number of such Entries in each together with notes as to their distribution by Counties. It was not deemed advisable in tabular form the details in that Table by Counties, but the relative numerical strength of the principal Surnames in each Registration County is as follows * :—

seen that although the name "Murphy" is the most numerous in the country at is not occupy the leading place in many of the counties. In the Province of Leinster in is only—Wexford and Carlow—does it stand first. With regard to this name in the ty, the Earl of Courtown in a recent paper on the "Celts and Teutons in Ireland," follows :—

is the Anglicised form of MacMurrough, the old regal family of Leinster. On the death of Murrough, the last acknowledged King of Leinster, his rights, by English law, passed to his only d, Eva, wife of Richard de Clare, Earl of Pembroke, known as Strongbow. The legitimate continued in the descendants of Dermot's brother Morrogh, who continue to hold lands in rd. This name is by far the most numerous in the county, and is found in every part of it."

counties of Dublin, Louth, and Wicklow, "Byrne" is the most common name, whereas and King's County, "Kelly" heads the list. In Longford and Meath, "Reilly" is the ame, and in Kilkenny, "Brennan." In Queen's County, "Dunne" appears at the head and in Westmeath, "Lynch."

Province of Munster, "Sullivan" is the predominant name in Cork and Kerry, followed, er county, very closely by the name "Murphy." "Ryan" heads the list in Limerick and while "McMahon" and "Power" are the leading names, respectively, in the counties of Waterford.

Province of Ulster in one county only, namely, Armagh, is the name "Murphy" in excess rs. In Antrim, "Smith" appears first; in Cavan, "Reilly;" in Donegal, "Gallagher;" wn, "Thompson." The leading name in Fermanagh is "Maguire," and in Londonderry, stands at the head of the list. The principal names in Monaghan and Tyrone are and "Quinn," respectively.

Province of Connaught, in no one county does the name "Murphy" occupy the principal n Galway and Roscommon the name "Kelly" takes precedence, and in Leitrim that Reynolds" are the first two on the list and equally represented. "Walsh" stands first y of Mayo, and "Brennan" heads the list in Sligo.

An interesting feature connected with the Table on pages 31 to 73, is the fact that it exhibits names as peculiar to particular provinces or counties. Some of these names may be found in other parts of the country, though not so represented in the Births Index for 1890.

Thus the following names, amongst others, are principally found in the Province of Leinster:
